

Journal of Human Rights

PRESENTS

Special Issue on Public Opinion Polling and Human Rights

Vol. 16, Issue 3, July-September, 2017

Guest Editor: James Ron

Most human rights activists make assumptions about the public's views towards them and their work, but do not subject those assumptions to rigorous empirical investigation. In this special issue of the Journal of Human Rights, a collection of skilled survey researchers offers a rare, cross-national view of the general public's attitudes towards human rights issues, principles and organizations. This unique collection of scholarly articles draws on original data collected from Korea to Mexico, and deepens the human rights community's engagement with the art of survey research.

Selected Contents

Overview

James Ron

The Construction of Human Rights Actorhood: Findings from the Korean General Social Survey

Jeong-Woo Koo

More than Words? 'Genocide,' Holocaust Analogies and Public Opinion in the United States

Benjamin Valentino and Ethan Weinberg

A Neglected Nexus: Human Rights and Public Perceptions

Dona-Gene Barton, Courtney Hillebrecht, and Sergio C. Wals

Local Resources for Local Rights? The Mumbai Fundraiser's Dilemma

Archana Pandya and James Ron

Rights Trap or Amplifier? Crime and Attitudes Toward Local Human Rights Organizations in Mexico

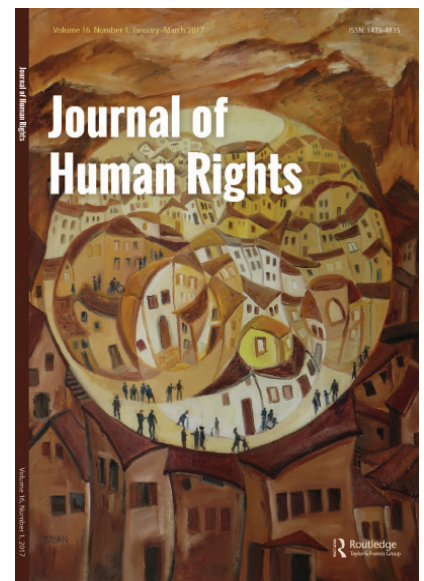

David Crow

How Protest Affects Opinions of Peaceful Demonstration and Expression Rights

Amanda Murdie and Carolin Purser

Public Opinion on Human Rights in Putin-era Russia: Continuities, Changes, and Sources of Variation

Theodore P. Gerber

Editor: Shareen Hertel, University of Connecticut

Learn more at <http://humanrights.uconn.edu/>